SYNOPSIS

Duke Senior has been banished from the court by his usurping younger brother, Frederick, and many lords, including the melancholy Jaques, have followed him into exile to the Forest of Arden.

Rosalind, Duke Senior's daughter, falls in love with Orlando, the youngest son of the late Sir Rowland de Boys, when he comes to the court to try his fortune in a wrestling match, but then she too is banished by her uncle, the usurping duke, whose daughter, Celia, accompanies her into the forest. The princesses disguise themselves; Rosalind becomes the boy, Ganymede, Celia, the boy's sister, Aliena. They take with them Touchstone, a court fool. Orlando flees to the forest to escape the tyranny of his older brother, Oliver, who has plotted to kill him at the wrestling.

In the Forest of Arden, Orlando meets Ganymede, and goes every day to 'him' to talk of love and woo the 'boy', who impersonates Rosalind. Phebe, a shepherdess spurns the love of a shepherd, Silvius, but herself falls in love with Ganymede. Touchstone meets a peasant girl, Audrey ...

All these unions are eventually sanctified by Hymen, the god of marriage, and after the spiritual conversation of Duke Frederick, possessions and positions are restored to their original owners.
