In the years directly following World War II, everyone was looking forward to change and improvement—a change for a peaceful world situation, renewed prosperity, and a fresh outlook on day-to-day living.

The Marshall Plan was organized to insure stability in Europe ration cards gave way to freedom to buy butter, gasoline, and silk stockings whenever they were needed business boomed as production of consumer goods increased Christian Dior's "New Look" was to be the pace-setting design for the next decade.

Today another, entirely different new look is found in the fashion world. Mini-skirts, pierced earrings, chunky heels, and textured stockings reflect the temper of the fast-paced present world. The Lyons Shop is the place to see these items, foremost in fashion change and improvement to-day.
