DIRECTOR---ROBERT SCHARMANN

New Wine in Old Bottles

Steven Gaye has nothing on us in selecting older men for his ideal husbands. Quite modestly, we admit that we have the edge on youth. Our mother and sisters, our sweethearts and wife have made us more appreciative of the fine qualities of Womanhood. We are more tolerant of their little whims and idiosyncrasies, more complimentary to their many charms. Their praise is continually in our mouth and our little remembrances keep our sweetheart sweet.

With that foresight so characteristic of older lovers, we arranged for our wife to be born in Salt Lake City. While that did not make her a Mormon, it would naturally make her broad-minded in the matter of her husband's deep appreciation of feminine pulchritude among the Co-eds. If we were questioned on how we enjoy our college wife, we could say that life has been a continual feast as we constantly survey the beauty contests that the Bucknell Belles present to us. If we seem unduly complimentary at times, it is not the blarney of an old fool, it is rather the greater appreciation of older men with its "Accent on Youth." Young womanhood is the most charming and the most beautiful part of Creation, and our failure to enjoy the scenery is a sure sign of senility or blindness.
